I can't say enough good things about Tess! She was really amazing as a TF. She was incredibly helpful, accessible, and did a wonderful job explaining and simplifying difficult concepts. In particular, she was a tremendous help on the final project. Sections were very well run and her feedback on assignments and the final project were really informative.

Tess was quite approachable outside of class and helped me a lot with my final paper, problem sets, and learning STATA commands.

Hands down, Tess is the best TF I have had in my three years at Harvard. Tess is extremely devoted to her teaching work, extremely knowledgeable about both statistical concepts and software, and she is really great at explaining concepts. Throughout the semester, Tess made herself available to the class for help on homework and final projects. She provided extra office hours when we were people were having trouble with one of the homework assignments, and she set up hour-long meetings with everybody in the class at least a few times during the semester. Tess really did so much for us and she never made it feel like a burden -- it seemed like she truly enjoyed it.
