Tentative syllabus as of September 4, 2018 – contents may change

This course offers a PhD-level introductory overview of the field of international relations. The primary purpose is to understand and evaluate the main theories, arguments, claims, and conjectures made by scholars in the field (plus learn a bit about how the field has evolved). What are the main ways in which scholars organize and assess knowledge in the field? In addition, the course is designed to assist in preparation for the Government Department's general examinations in international relations. Enrollment is normally limited to Government Department PhD students. Auditing is not permitted.

Time and Place

This seminar will meet on Tuesdays from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m. in CGIS K450

Requirements and Grading

1. Active and prepared participation in class discussions, and discussion leadership (twice in the term, paired with another student). Discussion questions should be e-mailed to Professors Hiscox and Kertzer by 5:00 pm on the day before the assigned class.
2. A review essay of at least three recent books with implications for international relations theory with a view to submission to an academic journal. The review should revolve around some shared theme across the books and should provide a springboard for exploring a theoretical issue or empirical puzzle that interests you. Examples of review essays can be found in Perspectives on Politics, International Organization, and World Politics, among other journals in the field. More details about a review essay will be provided later in the semester. The review essay should be no more than 25-30 pages double-spaced and is due by email to both professors by October 30 (40%).
3. Oral assessment: "mock generals," Dec 4 (30%).

For each week there are two categories of readings.

1. Required readings. These are the specific subject of discussion in class, although there may be weeks in which we will prioritize specific readings in advance. All readings will be available on the course webpage: <https://canvas.harvard.edu/courses/43383>
2. Recommended readings. These are a mix of both older and more recent readings on the topic for the week. Some contain the origins of various debates that are ongoing in the field. Others are more recent readings that delve more deeply into the topic, or provide more recent empirical data. You can consult these as you explore topics that interest you. If IR is your major area of interest you should eventually become familiar with these works.
3. While this course does not emphasize game theoretical approaches to IR, for those of you who have no background in game theory or formal modeling, please read over the next couple of weeks a primer written by Professor Hiscox for Gov 2710 "A Brief Introduction to Game Theoretic Analysis". It can be found under "Files" on the course web page.
